Why Go To Church?

The Drama of the Eucharist
Timothy Radcliffe op
Religion

One Sunday a mother shook her son awake, telling him it was time to go to church. No effect. Ten minutes later she was back: "Get out of bed immediately and go to church." "Mother, I don't want to. It's so boring! Why should I bother?" "For two reasons: You know you must go to church on a Sunday, and secondly, you are the bishop of the diocese." It is not only bishops who sometimes feel no desire to go to church. Surveys show that a high percentage of people in the West believe in God but attendance at Sunday services is plummeting.

Some believe religion is a private affair between themselves and God and what happens on Sundays in church is irrelevant. So why Go?

Fr. Radcliffe answers this question by asking: "Why go to the Eucharist? We do go to church for all sorts of other services, for baptism, weddings and funerals. The Eucharist has as its focus the reason why we go at all."

Timothy Radcliffe was until recently Master General of the Dominican Order. He is the winner of the 2007 Michael Ramsey prize for theological writing for his book, What is the Point of Being a Christian? He lives in Oxford.

St. Benedict

This is the great SAINT BENEDICT of NURSIA, father of all Western monks. Saint Benedict was born in Italy, in 480. In 529, on a mountain called Monte Cassino, he built the first great abbey of the Benedictines. His twin sister, Saint Scholastica, became a nun and a saint. She died forty days before him, on February 10, and they were both buried in the same grave. Saint Benedict died on March 21, standing before the altar, just after he had received Holy Communion. In his humility, he never became a priest. His life was written by the Pope, Saint Gregory the Great.

The Benedictine Order, as we are told in the martyrologies of its monasteries, has given the Catholic Church 57,000 known saints. This great Order has also given the Catholic Church thirty-five Popes, of whom seventeen have been declared either Saints or Blessed.
